Infant and Child CPR and First Aid Training
Foster Parents Encouraged to Get CPR Trained Beginning July 1, 2019

Although you hope you’ll never have to use cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) on a child or infant, it is important to know the steps so that you can help in the event of a cardiac or breathing emergency.

The Office of Children’s Services is highly recommending licensed foster parents take Infant and Child CPR and First Aid training. One training hour credit will be given for every hour you are in the training. The Alaska Center for Resource Families (ACRF) website has a list of approved CPR and First Aid training courses. Please feel free to let ACRF know of any other excellent training programs for CPR and First Aid. On-line CPR and First Aid training from the American Red Cross will be accepted for foster parents who live in communities that do not have a hands-on class. To support you in taking the classes, as of July 1, 2019, the Office of Children’s Services will reimburse you the cost* of the Child and Infant CPR and First Aid training you take after that date if you are a licensed foster parent. After you have completed your training, present a copy of your receipt and certificate to your OCS Community Care Licensing Specialist. A reimbursement check will be mailed to you. A copy of your receipt and certificate is required in order to be reimbursed for the cost of the class. Your Community Care Licensing Specialist will send a copy of your certificate to ACRF for training hours and these hours will count toward your training requirement. Contact your Community Care Licensing Specialist or your local Alaska Center for Resource Families office (or call ACRF toll free at 1-866-478-7307) if you have any questions.

*Please note that treatment foster parents with a placement agency should secure CPR/First Aid Training through their monitoring agency and are not eligible for reimbursement through OCS.

How to Apply for OCS Child Care Support

If you are a foster parent who needs child care support for a foster child in your home, contact the OCS Child Care Unit in Juneau at (907) 465-5648 or toll free 1-844-465-5648 or ocschildcare@alaska.gov. You no longer need to go through your caseworker but go directly to this unit. Child care providers need to be licensed providers to qualify or willing to get licensed and all child care requests must be reviewed and preapproved by the OCS child Care Unit before you make a commitment to that provider. You will need to provide the unit with information on the selected child care including contact person, address, and phone number. This type of assistance is used strictly for child care services. OCS will not pay day care late fees, additional charges for early/late drop-off or pick up activity or transportation fees and there is a limit of $700 a month for child care fees. For more information, contact a Child Care Payment Specialist directly.

ACRF Satisfaction Survey

Look for the ACRF Satisfaction Survey coming out in August and help us improve. We are sending out a Survey Monkey to get your feedback and ideas of how we are doing. It only takes a few minutes on line to take the survey and you can enter for a chance to earn a $25 Amazon gift card. We welcome your ideas!

WIC Program moving to “eWIC” Cards

ATTN ALASKA FOSTER PARENTS! The WIC Program is moving from checks to an Electronic Benefit Transfer Card called “eWIC.” This eWIC card looks and acts like a debit card. Foster children under the age of five are eligible for WIC so foster parents should know that the new system is rolling out across the state in stages. Anchorage, the Interior, and the Mat-Su rolled out in June. Southcentral will roll in mid-July and Western and Southeast Regions will be in August. Go to the State of Alaska website under DHSS/Public Assistance/WIC for more information and a great video that explains it all.
CLAIMING - NOT BLAMING!

“Blaming” – the fine art of making others responsible for all the difficult things that happen to us – is something our modern society seems to support as perfectly acceptable. Reality TV shows force us scenes of one character blaming another, and newspapers are awash with stories about how all of society’s problems are to be blamed on politicians or terrorists and there is nothing we can do. But is our culture of blame helpful?” - Andrea Blundell*

When a child first goes into foster care, it is easy for us - and the child - to understand that it is because the child’s parents couldn’t take care of them. But when the child goes back and forth between home and care, or moves on to a second or third placement, a shift occurs in the way our culture looks at the situation. Why did the child come back into care? Why are the foster homes asking for this child to be removed? Doesn’t it start to look like there must be something wrong with the child? And if our culture see it that way, what might the child be thinking?

Throughout our many years of experience we have recognized that children in foster care blame themselves. “If only I had gone to school (or hadn’t hit the other children, or thrown a tantrum, or...) then I might be able to stay, or even go home. What’s wrong with me?” And our culture reinforces this by reacting to the child’s behaviors, rather than responding to the needs causing them. By not recognizing that these behaviors are often a result of the child’s circumstances, it’s very easy to view the child as being at fault.

Successful adoption relies on our ability to acknowledge that blaming is detrimental to any potential relationship, especially one between a parent and a child. The answer to making an adoption possible is a parent claiming a child instead of blaming a child.

We can’t ignore a child’s difficult behavior, and in fact, should hold them responsible for it. But the moment we approach a bad situation by trying to find out whose fault it is, we begin to delay making the situation better. When an adult blames a child’s behavior for their circumstances, they model an approach not only of anger, but of helplessness and of hopelessness, reinforcing the child’s feeling of self-blame. The focus should instead be on solving the problem. It is more appropriate, and also very powerful, to be able to say, “You belong to me, so we will figure this out together.”

When a child is truly claimed by a family, the very act of claiming removes the possibility of having a “bottom line” or “deal breaker,” which if crossed, would result in a disruption (a child leaving a home before a finalized adoption), or a dissolution (a family returning a post-finalized child to the foster care system).

Bottom lines and deal-breakers are blaming reactions. A child may need more support than a family can offer within their home, and may have to live, at least temporarily, in a more supportive environment. But that doesn't mean that the child isn't entitled to have a family.

Claiming always overpowers blaming.

Thank you to Mat-Su Health Foundation!

A big thank you to the Mat-Su Health Foundation for funding our TBRI (Trust Based Relational Intervention) Series in the Mat-Su Valley over the past year. This grant allowed us to send our nationally trained facilitator Brenda Ursel from Anchorage to Wasilla to provide three workshops on the TBRI principles of Connecting, Empowering and Correcting aimed at families and professionals working with children from hard places. We want to thank Wasilla Middle School for donating the space and technical assistance to help us provide a first class training series. Special thanks to Stacy McIntosh, Deb Haynes, Sue Giblin, Gena Chastain, Michelle Boyden and John Brown. Thanks to REACH 907 and Rachel Olson for being such great partners in bringing TBRI training to the Mat-Su Valley.

Because of the awesome grant and donations to this project, we were also able to build up our trauma informed resources and training resources for our Lending Library in the Mat-Su Office and assist at another TBRI Training in Wasilla in June in conjunction with REACH 907, the Mat-Su Health Foundation, and Church on the Rock entitled “TBRI: Principles to Practice.”

EATING SMART • BEING ACTIVE TRAINING FOR FOSTER PARENTS

ACRF is partnering with the UAF Cooperative Extension and the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program to bring this training to Fairbanks and Mat-Su in September! (See Training Calendar for dates)

Eating Smart • Being Active is an evidence-based, healthy eating and active living curriculum. This training will include a variety of topics like meal planning and shopping, dietary guidelines, food safety, quick meals, fitness and exercise, nutrition during pregnancy, feeding infants and preschoolers and so much more! Participants will be cooking, participating in group learning and moving! The class is free and sessions count toward foster parent training hours.

Trauma-Informed Caregiving for Resource Families
Rural Teleconference Series

Most children coming into foster care have experienced some kind of trauma and it can be difficult to find caring ways to parent them in a caring and healing way. This six-part series features material from the National Child Traumatic Stress Network Curriculum. We invite you to learn more about trauma-informed caregiving and becoming a healing family to the children in your care.

This monthly series from July to December 2019 will be led by ACRF Staff and features teleconference training, optional homework assignments, and extra reading (for extra credit). Sessions will be recorded and posted on our website at a later date.

SCHEDULE:

Session 1: Tuesday: July 9: 7-8pm: Understanding Trauma’s Effects Jodi von Brandt
Session 2: Tuesday: August 13: 7-8pm: Building a Safe Place Rachel Hanft
Session 3: Tuesday: September 10: 7-8pm: Dealing with Feelings and Behaviors Regina Davis
Session 4: Tuesday: October 15: 7-8pm: Connections and Healing Behaviors Aileen McInnis
Session 5: Tuesday: November 12: 7-8pm: Becoming an Advocate Kimberly Mouriquand
Session 6: Tuesday: December 10: 7-8pm: Taking Care of Yourself Rachel Hanft

This monthly Rural Teleconference is designed for anyone living outside of Anchorage, although anyone can participate. Families may participate by dialing 1-800-944-8766 and when asked enter the code: 23867#. Please call in 5 minutes early to give us your contact information so we can record your attendance, or stay on the line and speak to the facilitator after the teleconference ends. Check the website www.acrf.org teleconference training calendar prior to the teleconference for posted handouts or PowerPoints.
